CHARGE IS DISMISSED.

Insufficient evidence to show that Edward Rink had violated the law, resulted in the dismissal yesterday of the case brought against him in the court of Justice William Fisher on the charge of manslaughter. The testimony presented by witnesses proved almost conclusively that he was driving his automobile at a low speed when it struck little Rosalia (Tiny) daughter of John Chapp, who made the complaint, and killed the little one. Evidence also proved that warning had also been sounded and that every effort was made to avoid a collision.

VOTE TUESDAY WILL BE HEAVY

Total Likely to Exceed Any Other
Election Here

All indications point to the fact that Calumet township will cast the largest vote in its history Tuesday. The intense interest that has developed makes it almost certain that every registered voter will cast his ballot and as there are now 4,537 voters on the new books and from 50 to 100 more on the old books, whose names have not been transferred, it would not be surprising if the total amounted to 4,250, or almost 1,000 more than a normal vote for this township.

Although there has been no general re-registration in the township, the preparation of new registration books by Township Clerk Geo. Martin practically amounts to the same thing. The names of all registered voters who enrolled for the primary election were transferred into the new registration books, amounting to 4,315 in all. As there was a general re-enrollment in January, it is practically certain that all of the names so copied are of voters who still reside in the township and are eligible to cast their ballots Tuesday. The old books, which contained the names of all registered voters including those who failed to re-enroll and whose names have therefore not been copied into the new books, will also be in use Tuesday, so that no voter will be disfranchised. As such voters cast their ballots, their names will be registered in the new books. It is planned to use the old books in addition to the new for about three more elections, after which they will be discarded and the new books, which will then be up to date, will be depended upon entirely thereafter.

JOHN WADE PASSES AWAY.
